Please Note: The documentation for an application consists of the copies of source material used to support the facts (birth, marriage, and death) presented on the application worksheet that is sent to the applicant to complete. Ideally, each generation is supported by the birth, marriage, and death records for the line carrier and their spouse. This is rarely the case, but it should be the goal wherever possible. The first attempt to document a lineage should use primary records. These are records that have recorded the fact in question at or near the time it occurred. For example, a modern death record will commonly list a date and place of birth. Since this is only a primary source for the death and happened many years after the birth occurred, other supporting documents are needed to document this birth.

The most commonly used records after vital records are church, cemetery, census, probate, and land records. Occasionally these records are missing or do not fully support (i.e. part of the date or perhaps a place is missing) the fact. In these situations, you can use a combination of documents and also support the details with a secondary source such as a family genealogy or local history. These secondary sources can never be used as the sole support for a fact. The key minimum documentation needed is to connect the parents to the child in each generation. If you are stuck and have most, but not all the documentation you need, submit what you have to the Historian to evaluate what you have. The Historian will contact you if further documentation is needed along with what to look for and where. It is normal for this type of exchange between the applicant and the Historian before the documentation process is completed.

One photocopy is required of each document. 8 ½ x 11 copies only. No staples. No paperclips. No highlighting.

The General Society of Mayflower Descendants now requires full documentation on the last three generations (yourself, your parents and your grandparents), including spouses as well as line carriers. Specifically, this means that the General Society requires documentation for all marriages and divorces in these three generations for both line carriers and spouses.
